TO PRINT OR NOT TO PRINT

Our feeling about the whole thing is this: we joined APA to share our printed pieces with other hobbyists, to learn and to have some fun.

Others, no doubt, have their own reasons for being members. It detracts not a bit from our enjoyment that some others don't contribute to the bundle. Of course, the day may come when APA is made up entirely of receivers, without a single printer. Meantime, live and let live, we always say.

A (S-SH!) QUESTION

We read these days that the CIA has infiltrated some of the most unlikely educational, civic and religious organizations of the U. S. A. As far as we can determine, no attempt has been made to subvert the APA. Why, we ask? Is our association unworthy of CIA's attention? Are we so insignificant? Doesn't the CIA appreciate the power of the press? And doesn't it realize that we, too, could handily use a chunk of the Federal largesse so generously distributed by the agency? A few more Big Bundles like this last one and Oldham is going to run out of postage stamps!
